Data disclaimer

As diaspora definitions vary widely, we have chosen to use comparable data on emigration as a proxy. This does not include all who consider themselves diaspora and is not necessarily aligned with national definitions of diaspora. Emigration data comes from UNDESA (2024) and remittances from the World Bank (2024).

Overview of policy and legislative framework

- 2013 ● Overseas Employment and Migrants Act (OEMA)³ facilitates foreign employment and ensures a safe migration governance system. As part of the Act: (1) all workers migrating from Bangladesh, including domestic workers, are recognised as workers and are guaranteed basic labour rights; (2) they have the right to legal remedy; (3) they can access labour courts, mobile courts, and other courts; and (4) the Bureau of Manpower, Employment and Training (BMET) and labour attachés in destination countries are recognised as key rights custodians.
- 2016 ● Expatriate Welfare and Overseas Employment Policy (EWOEP)⁴ complements the OEMA 2013 by offering a more comprehensive policy framework for safe labour migration. Its priority areas include: protection of the rights of migrants and their families; welfare support for migrant workers; gender-specific labour migration; integrating labour migration with national development; and migration governance. The government will work in consultation with various stakeholders, including prospective migrants, trade unions, recruiting agencies, employers and international organisations.
- 2016 ● Seventh Five Year Plan⁵ has a separate section called 'Migration for Development' which focuses on areas of economic growth and equity, skills and overseas labour market development and protection, human development and migration and enabling frameworks for migration and development through South-South cooperation.
- 2018 ● Wage Earners' Welfare Board (WEWB) Act⁶ provides a legal framework for improved welfare services for migrant women and male workers. The governing body of the WEWB⁷ includes relevant ministries and two delegates from recruitment agencies as well as migrant workers, including women.
- 2018 ● Bangladesh National Strategy and Action Plan on Migration and Development⁸
This plan focuses on eight priority areas: recruitment process and related financial costs; social costs; skills development; social protection and rights; irregular migration and human trafficking; remittances; diaspora engagement; and climate migration.
- 2020 ● Bangladesh Migration Governance Framework.⁹ In 2020, the government of Bangladesh developed a national Migration Governance Framework with the support of IOM. This framework includes diaspora as a crucial part of Bangladesh's international migration approach. The framework extensively shares the activity plans on diaspora's investment, knowledge and skills and their protection during crises abroad.
- 2023 ● National Diaspora Policy 2023 (draft)¹⁰ outlines a comprehensive framework aimed at harnessing the financial, intellectual and social diaspora potential through improved institutional coordination and dedicated mechanisms. Key aspects include fostering inclusive, respectful engagement through a whole-of-government approach; mobilising cultural, human, and economic capital; facilitating both physical and virtual return; and improving access to rights such as dual citizenship and voting. The policy builds on international commitments, including the 2022 Global Diaspora Summit and IMRF pledges.

Wage Earners' Development Bond (WEDB), 1981

The central bank of Bangladesh has taken the initiative to attract the investments of overseas wage earners and diaspora members. Bonds can be purchased without opening a foreign currency account by submitting the copy of the wage earners' passport and through the exchange companies of Bangladeshi banks working abroad.

US Dollar Investment Bond (USDIB) and US Dollar Premium Bond (USDPB), 2002

The Government introduced these bonds to facilitate investment in foreign currency by non-resident Bangladeshis.

Dhaka Stock Exchange Ltd, NRB Bank, Probashi Kalyan Bank (PKB)

The stock exchange provides incentives for Non-Resident Bangladeshis (NRBs) such as a 10% quota in all Initial Public Offerings (IPOs) reserved for NRBs, individual income tax assessment similar to resident Bangladeshis and a 10% tax rebate on security investment. The NRB Bank incentivises NRBs to invest in Bangladesh through remittances directly credited to a savings account which can be used to invest in WEDB; attractive interest rates; WEDB principal amount repatriated to the NRB's residing country; and USDPB entirely tax waived and principal amount repatriated to residing country in US Dollar.¹¹ The state-run PKB provides collateral free loans to workers going abroad, returnees, facilitate remittances and encourage investment.

Migrants in Countries in Crisis (MICIC), 2018

The EU-ICMPD MICIC programme in Bangladesh initiated cooperation between diaspora communities in Italy and Malaysia, the embassies in both host countries and the Bangladeshi central authorities (MFA and MEWOE) to engage diaspora in crisis preparedness and response effort. MICIC also held a workshop in December 2019 in Dhaka to validate the country's new Migration Crisis Operational Framework, as well as crisis preparedness and response plans for countries hosting large numbers of migrants from Bangladesh.¹²

#BacharLorai (Baa-Char-Law-Rye) 2020

A coordination platform which sprang out of the Covid-19 pandemic to bring together expats, citizens and grassroots organizations working on complex policy challenges in Bangladesh.

Initially a hashtag meaning "fight for survival", it was transformed into a coordination platform to coordinate different actors. In 2020 the coordination efforts mobilised funds to distribute food supplies as well as acquiring medical equipment. This helped provide relief to tens of thousands of people in Bangladesh. The platform continued as Resource Coordination Network Bangladesh connecting grassroots organizations and subject matter experts who help identify bottlenecks, promote knowledge sharing and provide support for new initiatives.

Diaspora 4 Climate Action 2023-2024

Funded by IOM Development Fund, the initiative fosters collaboration between the diaspora communities and national governments to strengthen climate-change responses. This model positions the Bangladeshi diaspora not just as financial supporters, but as active partners and “Climate Champions” integral to the country’s environmental resilience strategy.

Bangladeshi Global Diaspora Council (BDGDC)

BDGDC is a dedicated advisory and consultative body designed to deepen engagement between Bangladesh and its diaspora worldwide. It includes youth leadership camps and civic training to foster engagement, entrepreneurship support through skills development and business incubation, particularly for women and youth, and volunteer initiatives focused on digital literacy and community development. Additionally, it promotes social integration through cultural and educational activities that encourage inclusion and cohesion within diverse diaspora communities.

E-saline: a new tool for smart agriculture (D4D Grant)

ASG-Germany e.V., in collaboration with its local partners AN-TAR, and supported by EUDiF through the Diaspora 4 Development (D4D) grants, aims to provide coastal farmers with simple tools to measure soil salinity through the development of a user-friendly mobile app that suggests the best types of salinity resilient crops. Through trainings, seed and fertilizer support, especially for women, the project empowers communities to boost yields, strengthen food security and build resilience to climate change. This knowledge will be passed on to other farmers living in the Satkhira district through community mobilisers to ensure rural communities improve their salinity-resilient and inclusive farming practices and enhance their well being and livelihoods.

Shuveccha digital app

Shuveccha is a government-backed digital platform developed for Bangladesh’s global diaspora of over 12 million Non-Resident Bangladeshis (NRBs). The platform facilitates access to government and consular services, investment and business opportunities, employment and skills development resources, as well as information relevant to migrant workers and students abroad.

>> Observations

The “Observations” and “Obstacles” sections contain additional information on the context of diaspora engagement that does not fit directly into the other sections. They are based on a combination of literature review and comments from the authors. New information is incorporated during the annual updates. Readers are invited to verify the relevance of the information at the time of reading, as the context may have evolved.

Successive governments of Bangladesh have gradually realised the importance of its migrant communities. The most decisive step in this respect was in creating a separate ministry, the Ministry of Expatriates’ Welfare and Overseas Employment (MoEWOE), in 2001 to efficiently manage the migration sector. Banks have also begun to provide financial incentives to the diaspora and migrants. They provide loans to migrant workers and minimise income tax for diaspora who invest through these banks. They also provide tax rebates on diaspora investments.

In 2022, the government has increased cash incentive on remittance to 2.5% from 2% to encourage migrants to use proper channels to send money home. The government's decision to propose this incentive came as the remittance flow to the country has been falling sharply for some months as the expatriates continue to prefer informal channels for sending their money. According to data from Bangladesh Bank, expatriate Bangladeshis sent $1.55 billion in November 2022, down 25% year-on-year. This was the lowest remittance earnings since June 2020.¹³

The 2025 remittance policy in Bangladesh aims to enhance the value and convenience of sending money home, particularly for “Non-resident Bangladeshis” (NRB), while also promoting formal channels over informal ones. Additionally, there is growing interest in diaspora bonds as a means to leverage remittances for development projects, reflecting a trend among various countries to engage their overseas communities in financing national initiatives.

Achievements

National efforts have so far focused on creating an enabling environment for migrants and built trust through an increased attention to labour migrants' rights. The government has shown a strong commitment to develop a migration system that complies with global human rights norms, including by regulating the role of recruitment agents.

Obstacles

- Formal channels: Bangladesh does not have a specific institution that targets diaspora engagement so formal and structured support from the government (including the embassies) could be further strengthened to channel such engagement. There is also no regular and comprehensive system to tap into diaspora support for development initiatives in areas such as technology, skills transfer and tourism.
- Remittances: most remittances are informally transferred to individual households due to concerns of corruption, red tape, political instability, high money transfer fees and a feeling of not knowing how to help.¹⁴
- Diaspora fragmentation: Bangladesh's diaspora comprises several distinct groups, including pre-1995 migrants, second-generation youth, and emerging high-skilled professionals - each with unique needs, identities, and capacities for engagement. The absence of tailored approaches limits the country's ability to fully leverage the diaspora's diverse contributions.
- Return: There is a gap in framing policies on returning migrants, this undermines reintegration programmes. Low-skilled migrants often come back with higher skills than are in demand domestically. However, the absence of a database hinders employers from hiring appropriately skilled workers.

Diaspora related institutions

- At regional level

International Organisation for Migration (IOM) Dhaka

IOM has partnered with the Government of Bangladesh since the mid-1990s and has provided continuous support to the government in its migration management efforts. The IOM regional office has partnered with the government on several initiatives, including publication of an annual migration report.

International Labour Organisation (ILO) Dhaka

The International Labour Organization (ILO) works with the Bangladeshi government, workers and employers' organisations to promote decent and productive employment opportunities for women and men in Bangladesh. Bangladesh has been an active member state of the ILO since 1972 and has ratified 35 ILO Conventions including seven fundamental conventions.

- National institutions

- At ministerial level

Ministry of Expatriates' Welfare and Overseas Employment (MoEWOE)

The ministry was established in 2001 to ensure the overall welfare and equal opportunities for expatriate Bangladeshi citizens to explore new labour markets, to create a skilled labour force through training according to the demands of the market, to reduce unemployment through foreign employment and to increase remittance inflow. MoEWOE is the focal ministry for labour migration policies and programme implementation and it performs these functions in cooperation with other government institutions.

- At sub-ministerial level

Bangladesh Bank

The Bangladesh Bank is the central bank and apex regulatory body for the country's monetary and financial system. It formulates and implements monetary and credit policies, regulates and supervises banks and non-bank financial institutions, manages international reserves, prevents money laundering and implements the foreign exchange regulation act¹⁵. The bank was involved in the setting up of the Wage Earners' Development Bond, which was one of the first diaspora engagement initiatives established in Bangladesh.

Bureau of Manpower, Employment and Training (BMET)

BMET was established in 1976 by the Government of Bangladesh as a department under the then Ministry of Manpower Development and Social Welfare. It is now under the Ministry of Expatriates' Welfare and Overseas Employment (MoEWOE) serving as its main executive arm. It is responsible for monitoring private recruitment agencies as well as facilitating the process of recruitment and migration of Bangladeshis for overseas employment.
