Emigration data comes from UNDESA (2024) and remittances from the World Bank (2024).

Overview of the policy and legislative framework

- 2003 ● Decree 1239 established the National Intersectoral Commission on Migration (CNIM) as a body for coordination and guidance in the implementation of immigration policy, which includes informing Colombians abroad about strategies concerning rights to protection and social security.
- 2009 ● CONPES 3603 Document approved the Comprehensive Migration Policy (PIM) established to provide guidelines, strategies and actions to assist Colombians abroad. It also acknowledges the rights of Colombians abroad and proposes measures such as developing a strategy for the use of remittances and the establishment of a remittances committee.³
- 2009 ● Comprehensive Migration Policy (PIM) - has the goals to: achieve the defence, protection and guarantee of the rights of Colombians abroad; to strengthen the transfer of skills of diaspora members with high human capital, as well as to maintain and expand training opportunities for Colombians abroad; and to ensure a permanent, sufficient and effective supply of state services towards Colombians abroad.
- 2011 ● Law No. 1465 of 2011 established the National Migration System (SMN) as “a harmonious combination of institutions, civil society organizations, norms, processes, plans and programmes through which to undertake the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of migration policy so as to enhance the quality of life of Colombian communities abroad.”⁴ It proposes measures such as developing a strategy for the productive use of remittances and the establishment of a remittances committee.
- 2021 ● Law 2136 establishes the definitions, principles and guidelines for the regulation and orientation of the Comprehensive Migration Policy (PIM). It contains a specific chapter on strengthening the community of Colombians abroad. It establishes measures for consular protection and assistance, underlining the right of Colombian migrants to receive information about their rights. It seeks to improve the demographic register of residents abroad, promote engagement with the country through initiatives and projects, encourage the productive use of remittances, and facilitate procedures through the use of technology. In addition, cultural promotion for diaspora children and the dissemination of tourism programmes are highlighted.

It also seeks to manage institutional initiatives for Colombians abroad and their families in Colombia, in terms of social security, housing acquisition, opening savings accounts in Colombian banks from abroad, appropriate use of remittances and information and guidance on the recognition and validation of qualifications. It aims to expand access to certified, practice-based training in renewable energy for rural youth and women in Colombia, helping them participate in emerging green economy opportunities. Colombian diaspora experts based in Germany will play an active role in delivering part of the training, supporting the transfer of skills and knowledge while strengthening connections between the diaspora and local communities.

Observations

The “Observations” and “Obstacles” sections contain additional information on the context of diaspora engagement that does not fit directly into the other sections. They are based on a combination of literature review and comments from the authors. New information is incorporated during the annual updates. Readers are invited to verify the relevance of the information at the time of reading, as the context may have evolved.

Firstly, there is an increasing interest in Colombia in strengthening the infrastructure supporting remittances and a renewed focus on using remittances more productively by cross selling products linked to remittances and securitising remittance flows.⁵

Colombia has investment schemes but does not have remittances for co-development, controls on remittance fees or improvement to remittance channels. In this regard, Colombia has reformed its tax laws to encourage expatriates to send a larger portion of their earnings to relatives in Colombia. The focus is on easing obstacles and providing incentives.

Secondly, there is a push to maintain relations between the state and diverse groups of the diaspora. The diaspora has an active part in engagement with the state, demanding participation in Colombian affairs.

Lately, the government has focused its efforts mainly on returnees, providing information support, networking, as well as tax and social assistance benefits.

Achievement

An International Victims’ Forum was established in 2014. It mobilised people in Europe and the Americas to make those living abroad more visible in the peace negotiations and to demand recognition of their rights in the process.

In August 2023, a new Digital Identification System was launched at the Consulate in Madrid, enabling Colombians abroad to obtain a “cédula digital” (ID card) or a duplicate remotely. This system – rolled out to all 27 Colombian consular posts in Europe – uses biometric recognition to issue secure digital IDs, a move hailed by the Ambassador in Spain as a way to modernise services and “reinforce the Colombian identity” among diaspora members.

Since the establishment of the National Day of the Colombian Migrant on October 10 2023, kicking off an annual “Month of Colombianidad Migrante” various cultural events throughout the month have been created such as the music event “A ritmo y sabor” and the film series “Colombia Crea Paz”.

Obstacles

- Trust: One challenge to diaspora engagement is building trust after decades-long civil war and political conflict. Although Colombian immigrants have started initiatives to form associations in the United States in order to facilitate collective action or giving, in practical terms few groups have been formed due to lack of trust and the fragmented nature of the diaspora (there are divisions between those supporting the peace agreements and those against it).
- Resentment: Efforts to promote the participation of the diaspora have not always been welcomed by civil society in Colombia because of widely held perceptions that 'living abroad' equalled 'living in comfort'. At times, sectors of the political opposition have criticized those who 'abandoned' the country in difficult times and later wanted to participate.⁶
- Gender: Difficulties such as 'machismo' in civil society organizations remain a significant hurdle for the participation of women both in Colombia and abroad.⁷
- Bureaucracy: Red tape and the lack of precedents have further impeded the implementation of participation in diaspora initiatives. For example, three years after having set aside two seats for diaspora representation, the National Peace Council has not been able to agree on the mechanism to select two people to occupy them.
