Facts & figures

Terminology: In general, the Indonesian diaspora is referred to as “Orang Indonesia perantauan” or “Diaspora Indonesia”. In the official documents, the Indonesian government uses the term “Masyarakat Indonesia di Luar Negeri” to refer to the diaspora. While there is no formally recognised English translation for the term, the official English sources and media normally switch between “Indonesian Overseas Community”, “Indonesian Society Overseas” and “Indonesian Communities Abroad”.

¹ Dual citizenship is not recognised in Indonesia according to Law Number 12/2006 on citizenship. In 2025, the Global Citizenship of Indonesia (GCI) was launched to address the issue of dual citizenship. GCI provides a permanent residence permit to foreign nationals who are former Indonesian citizens, descendants of former Indonesian citizens up to the second degree and the legal spouses of both Indonesian and former Indonesian citizens.

Overview of the policy and legislative framework

- 2016 ● Law Number 12/2016³ governs citizenship and allows for the children of Indonesian nationals married to foreign nationals to remain as a dual citizen until the age of 18, at which age they have to choose whether to remain an Indonesian citizen or give up the citizenship.
- 2016 ● Government Regulation Number 26/2016⁴ enables former Indonesian nationals living abroad to apply for multiple-entry five-year visas.
- 2017 ● Presidential Regulation Number 76/2017 on 'Facilities for Indonesian Communities Abroad'⁵ put into law the 'Diaspora Card'/Kartu Masyarakat Indonesian di Luar Negeri (KMILN/Card for Overseas Indonesian Communities). The card is given to overseas Indonesians who voluntarily register themselves with the foreign ministry either in Jakarta or through their embassies. It enables Indonesians abroad to apply for fast-tracked immigration processing during entry and exit from Indonesia, as well as provides diaspora members who are still Indonesian citizens with the ability to open Indonesian bank accounts, own property and take part in business ventures.
- 2018 ● The Law on the Protection of Indonesian Migrant Workers (No. 17/2018)⁶ is enforced to provide end-to-end protection to overseas Indonesian workers via integrated welfare and protection services throughout the migration cycle, skill improvement programmes for workers and capacity-building for the relevant public agencies.
- 2023 ● Minister of Law and Human Rights Regulation No. 22 of 2023⁷ officially enforced the 'Golden Visa Policy' to attract high-net-worth individuals, business leaders, global talents, and the Indonesian diaspora who can contribute to the country's economic development. The golden visa scheme provides the investors, including the diaspora, with streamlined procedures for establishing and investing in businesses in Indonesia and also offers an extended residency period to live and work in the country for between five and ten years. After a successful pilot process with nearly 300 permits issued and USD 123 million attracted, the visa issuance was officially launched in 2024.
- 2025 ● The 2025 - 2045 National Long-Term Development Plan (RPJPN) for Golden Indonesia⁸ maps out Indonesia's 20-year roadmap to achieve high-income status by 2045 through ensuring state stability, fostering sustainable development and building quality human capital. Under this roadmap, the Indonesian diaspora is strategically positioned as key agents of change in three crucial sectors, including arts and culture, and sports, and research and innovation, particularly that of emerging technologies like renewable energy and artificial intelligence.
- 2025 ● The Global Citizenship of Indonesia (GCI) Policy⁹ was introduced to address dual citizenship limitations by granting broad residency rights to foreigners who are former Indonesian citizens, descendants of former Indonesian citizens up to the second degree and the legal spouses of both Indonesian and former Indonesian citizens. The application for GCI is submitted online through the evisa.imigrasi.go.id platform.

- 2025 ● The Grand Strategy Soft Power Diplomacy Indonesia (GSDSP)¹⁰ emphasises the role of the diaspora in advancing Indonesia's soft power and enhancing its global reputation and influence. It aims to engage the diaspora as informal diplomatic ambassadors through various measures, such as: increasing awareness of their role and disseminating positive narratives about Indonesia; encouraging their involvement in national development through the establishment of business forums and the provision of networking opportunities with local entrepreneurs; and supporting the diaspora to introduce Indonesian cuisine, arts, culture and tourism at the global stage as part of cultural diplomacy efforts.

To prepare for the initiative, the Ministry of Finance distributed surveys to collect insights from the diaspora in Europe.

Second-home visa 2022

Indonesia announced second home visas, which would allow foreigners or former Indonesian citizens to stay in the country between five to ten years. The visa was introduced to attract wealthy foreigners to Indonesia, make positive contributions to the Indonesian economy, and encourage growth of investments in the country.

1,000 Creative Diaspora¹²

Implemented by the Ministry of Creative Economy and the Indonesian Diaspora Network, the 1,000 Creative Diaspora initiative aims to identify Indonesian creative talent abroad, build a global network of creative professionals, facilitate collaboration between the diaspora and the domestic creative industry and strengthen Indonesia's cultural diplomacy. A dedicated platform will be developed to register, map and connect creative diaspora individuals.

Diaspora Card

The diaspora card will allow the Indonesian government to keep more accurate data on its diaspora abroad, which will be useful for business and networking in the future. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Retno Marsudi, stated¹³ that the data will be used to improve government services for the diaspora, which currently consists of only two full-time staff within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Ministry's Expert Staff for Diaspora Affairs, Niniek Kun Nasyatie, has added that the card will also be a useful form of identification and marker of diplomatic protection for Indonesian domestic and foreign workers whose passports are often held by their foreign employers. However, the Indonesian Diaspora Network (IDN) raised concerns over unclear eligibility criteria¹⁴ for diasporas and bureaucratic delays that made KMILN implementation less effective than what was being proposed.

Observations

The "Observations" and "Obstacles" sections contain additional information on the context of diaspora engagement that does not fit directly into the other sections. They are based on a combination of literature review and comments from the authors. New information is incorporated during the annual updates. Readers are invited to verify the relevance of the information at the time of reading, as the context may have evolved.

The direct government appeal to Indonesians abroad to either return home or contribute to Indonesia's national development through financial or other means is in line with the message that the government has been projecting in recent times.¹⁵ In the past, governments have made similar appeals to overseas Indonesians to return home, but President Jokowi has amplified the rhetoric. The current government has sought to bring more foreign investment into key sectors, such as manufacturing, tourism, fisheries and infrastructure through diaspora bonds. It also seeks to increase remittances by asking the Indonesian diaspora to act as economic go-betweens in trade deals between Indonesia and host countries as well reducing the cost of remittances. The diaspora is lobbying for legislative changes that would allow them to maintain both material and emotional attachments with Indonesia, such as land ownership and business interests. In response, the government has promised to review the dual citizenship law and has proposed other initiatives to strengthen ties between overseas Indonesians and the 'homeland'.

Obstacles

- Low level of government support: There is currently no special government branch to liaise with the millions of diaspora subjects living abroad, and there are presently only two dedicated officers for diaspora matters in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.¹⁶
- Lack of societal support: The recent increase in nationalist rhetoric surrounding land and business ownership might cause some political pushback on the idea of land/business ownership by non-citizen members of the diaspora. Indonesia has traditionally held a deep distrust of foreigners and citizens living abroad. The idea of non-resident Indonesians receiving privileges through the diaspora card does not sit well with more conservative Indonesian politicians and public.
- Lack of representation: the lobby group Indonesian Diaspora Network has been lobbying for the Indonesian diaspora to have its own member of parliament representing a separate overseas electoral district in the national parliament. IDN members have complained that members of parliament have not properly looked after the concerns of Indonesians abroad.
- Poor implementation: There is a lack of clarity on details on special privileges for diaspora citizens who are citizens of foreign countries. The regulation states that benefits to diaspora Indonesians are to be administered by the relevant ministries and government institutions. There are many legislative, administrative and jurisdiction hurdles to overcome before the full benefits of the diaspora card are enjoyed.
- Enabling environment: Indonesian professionals and associations who are keen to contribute to Indonesia's development lack the necessary information and guidance to do so. Professionals such as medical doctors face obstacles collaborating with Indonesians due to differences in work ethics and formal practices.¹⁷ There is also a lack of acceptance of foreign qualifications and difficulties in obtaining formal recognition of diplomas and certificates.¹⁸
