Terminology: Rwanda uses the terms diaspora, 'Rwandans [living] abroad', or 'Rwandan community abroad' to refer to all Rwandans who left their country (whether involuntarily or voluntarily) and are willing to contribute to the development of Rwanda.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> From UNDESA Migration Stock Statistics for 2019. These likely represent significant underestimates for the size of the Rwandan diaspora in Europe. According to a forthcoming IOM study of Rwandan diaspora professionals in Europe (BE, DE, NL, UK), there are approximately 30,000 Rwandan diaspora in Belgium, and approximately 12,500 in the UK).

Rwanda Diaspora Policy 2009

The Rwandan diaspora policy is the guiding framework for the Government of Rwanda to enable the Rwandan diaspora to contribute and be integrated into national development.<sup>6</sup> It sets out three guiding pillars, each with their own specific objectives, namely; 'Cohesion of the Rwandan diaspora'; 'Rwandans in the diaspora are equipped with accurate information about their nation'; and 'the Rwandan Diaspora playing a significant role in the socio-economic development of Rwanda.'

The second pillar of this policy emphasised the need for sharing accurate information to the diaspora and by implication combatting misinformation. The third pillar sets out the strategic objectives for the government's diaspora engagement in terms of mobilising different forms of diaspora capital for Rwanda's development.

Overview of the policy and legislative framework

- 2015 ● National Migration Policy and Strategies were developed by the Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration in consultation with the diaspora as part of the Rwanda's strategy for economic development. They aim to "create a secure, enabling environment for increased trade, investments, tourism and skills development" and define Rwandan nationality and citizenship, as well as allowing Rwandan citizens to hold dual nationalities.
- 2017 ● Rwandan National Investment Strategy seeks to establish capacity-building initiatives for entrepreneurship through support for business development services. It also aims to attract Rwandan entrepreneurs, as well as other foreign investors and seeks to establish an attractive and favourable environment for doing business, including legal and financial reforms, tax incentives, and administrative procedures that are easy for the private sector to complete.
- 2020 ● Vision 2050. The Government released Vision 2050, which charts an ambitious development framework for 2020-2050. Vision 2050 focuses around the pillars of Economic Growth and Prosperity and High Quality of Life and Standards of Life for Rwandans. It aims for Rwanda to become an upper-middle income country by 2035, and a high-income country by 2050. Vision 2050 underscores it aims to guide the efforts of all players, including the diaspora

» Trends

Rwanda's diaspora engagement related policies and frameworks have developed from its troubled past; they aspire to maintain peace and reconciliation as well as to harness different forms of diaspora capital. The focus is on promoting cohesion, as can be seen in its diaspora and migration policies. Similarly, Rwanda's Vision 2020 strategy explains how the post-genocide state has ensured dual citizenship and encouraged diaspora participation in Rwanda.<sup>7</sup>

Remittance flows to Rwanda made up less than 3% of the country's GDP in 2017, which is in line with other countries in the Central African region.<sup>8</sup> Traditionally, the Rwandan diaspora remit via traditional money transfer operators, but increasingly they use mobile money apps

7 The Government itself notes that the Rwandan community abroad are represented by the Prime Minister, the Minister of Trade and four directors in government. See DMA/AU/GIZ (2019) Diaspora Engagement Self-Assessment Report

Interestingly, Rwanda has a stated policy objective of reducing the share of remittances to less than 3% of GDP, so as to avoid over reliance on remittances flows.

or direct bank-to-bank transfers as well as informal remittances.<sup>9</sup> A recent survey of Rwandan diaspora professionals in the UK found that a third of respondents had invested in some form of business in the country.<sup>10</sup> Rwandan diaspora investors have access to some incentives, such as the ability to open national bank accounts from abroad, and Rwanda has specific investment guidelines for Rwandan Communities Abroad (RCAs).<sup>11</sup>

Skills shortages remain a recurrent challenge in Rwanda, and the government is seeking to recruit Rwandan diaspora professionals in certain Technical, Vocational, Education and Training (TVET) sectors such as construction, ICT, renewable energy, mining and hospitality to address skills shortages in these areas.<sup>12</sup> The government previously worked with IOM under the Migration for development in Africa (MIDA) programme in 2002, which sought to address skills shortages in the health sector, and with UNDP from 2004-2007 on the Transfer of Knowledge Through Expatriate Nationals (TOKTEN) programme, which provided short-term volunteering opportunities as part of the UN Volunteers Programme.

In 2022, Rwanda has considered all citizens abroad for the first time in the national population and housing census unlike before when only diplomats were counted. The objective is to help the country consider them in national planning. In parallel, the MINAFFET is developing a Management Information System (MIS) to have a database of Rwandans living abroad.<sup>13</sup>

Achievements

Rwanda's approach to diaspora engagement has been two-fold. On the one hand, the government works with chapters of Rwandan Community Associations based in diaspora countries of settlement; these have a significant support base in the diaspora and are able to mobilise people and resources quite effectively for initiatives in Rwanda. On the other hand, the Government of Rwanda has also sought to reach out to those who are politically neutral and invite them to participate in Rwanda's development and reconstruction.

Since the 2000 the government has had dedicated structures to facilitate diaspora engagement. In 2001 a desk in charge of the diaspora was created in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation (MINAFFET) to help the Rwandan diaspora to acquire services they need from their motherland. In 2008, the Diaspora Desk was formalised into the Diaspora General Directorate (DGD).

Rwanda acknowledges the important role the diaspora can play in the areas of financial, virtual and physical transfers, image building, good governance, trade and investments.<sup>14</sup> The government of Rwanda established the Rwanda Diaspora Mutual Fund in 2011. The Mutual Fund acts as a pool of capital from Rwandans in the diaspora for collective investments in Rwanda. It also set up a national trust fund, the Agaciro Development Fund, which had an asset value of about USD43m in 2016, targeting diaspora and other investors.<sup>15</sup>

9 See forthcoming IOM Rwanda/ AFFORD study: 'A Study on Rwandans in the UK: Skills Base and Engagement with Rwanda'. One example of mobile money apps used by Rwandans in the diaspora is Muhcash, which was founded by a Rwandan diaspora entrepreneur.

10 IOM Rwanda/ AFFORD (forthcoming Study), op.cit. In most cases, this was restricted to small-scale family businesses, for example retail or catering, but some had invested money in IT (internet cafes), import-export, or the stock market. Land and property were again the most common types of investment for most respondents, with land being used for agricultural purposes (33% of respondents) or building on (40% of respondents). Most property investments were for use by family members or as a second home / retirement home for investors

15 The government closed this fund to contributions in April 2020, citing sufficient growth in capital and investment to make the fund self-sustaining as the key reason. See KT Press article.

Obstacles

- Legacy of the genocide: The traumatic legacy of the 1994 genocide has created deep divisions among Rwandan diaspora groups. While Rwandans have been engaged in a reconciliation process since more than two decades, the diaspora has been excluded from this process. This is a concern for Rwandan peacebuilders, confirming that the journey towards sustainable reconciliation should involve diaspora groups.<sup>16</sup>
- Lack of trust: There is significant mistrust of the government by some Rwandans in the diaspora, and aspects of its bureaucracy act as a barrier to more effective diaspora engagement. This lack of trust in government institutions extends to financial schemes such as the Agaciro sovereign wealth fund and mutual fund, which struggled to achieve scale.<sup>17</sup>
- Lack of suitable employment opportunities for skilled diaspora professionals: The government of Rwanda is keen to recruit skilled diaspora professionals to address skills shortages, but issues of low remuneration and high living costs in Kigali act as a barrier for diaspora professionals to relocate to Rwanda permanently.<sup>18</sup>
- Bureaucratic processes: Rwandan diaspora often complain about heavy bureaucratic processes for obtaining the required documentation in the country. This is particularly the case at local level, with problems of customer care, instances of corruption, and a lack of information on opportunities.<sup>19</sup>
