1 The 1998 Loi no. 37-1998 portant Code de la nationalité permits dual citizenship and also contains the unusual provision that if children are born in the border zones of countries neighbouring Gabon, or raised by Gabonese citizens, they may make a declaration during the 12 months preceding their majority that they have lived in Gabon for the preceding 10 years. Additionally, if they raised by a Gabonese citizen or on state assistance from before the age of 15, they can claim Gabonese nationality of origin.

2 Gabon's Senate has approved a new electoral code that expands voting rights for certain segments of the population and aligns with the version adopted earlier by the National Assembly. The reform grants two parliamentary seats to Gabonese citizens living abroad and lifts the requirement for dual-nationals to renounce their other citizenship in order to run in most elections, except for the presidency.

3 Voting rights for those living abroad extend to presidential elections and referendums. See Code electoral du Gabon (2018).

Overview of the policy and legislative framework

- 1991 ● The Constitution of Gabon⁵ (revised in 2018) guarantees freedom of movement within, and entry and exit from Gabon for all Gabonese citizens. It also states that all Gabonese citizens residing temporarily or permanently abroad can benefit from the protection and assistance of the state, according to conditions fixed by national law or international accord. In the perspective of the constitution aiming to protect citizens abroad, the minister of foreign affairs defended in January 22 a bill at the parliament that defines situations in which the State can intervene to protect diaspora members. Such situations include death or a serious injury abroad, arrest, detention, the need of an administrative document and others. This definition helps better translate the constitution to support the citizens of Gabon abroad.⁶
- 2008 ● Accord France-Gabon relatif à la gestion concertée des flux migratoires et au codéveloppement aims to facilitate human mobility, encourage temporary migration of Gabonese nationals, and to stimulate the circular return of skilled Gabonese diaspora professionals and investments in support of local development. In practical terms, this makes it easier for Gabonese students and skilled professionals to migrate to France for studies, employment, and skills development on a short- to medium-term basis. It thus enables skills transfer.
- 2012 ● Plan Stratégique Gabon Emergent (PSGE): Vision 2025 orientations stratégiques 2011-2016 is Gabon's most recent development strategy. It sets out the need to establish an effective policy of protection and assistance to Gabonese abroad. It sets out initial activities to achieve this, including mapping its diaspora in countries of residence and allocating consular capacity accordingly. It also notes the potential role of the diaspora in helping deliver PSGE, and that new diaspora engagement structures and capacity need to be built, along with as a suitable framework for harnessing diaspora skills and mobilising diaspora savings.

Observations

The “Observations” and “Obstacles” sections contain additional information on the context of diaspora engagement that does not fit directly into the other sections. They are based on a combination of literature review and comments from the authors. New information is incorporated during the annual updates. Readers are invited to verify the relevance of the information at the time of reading, as the context may have evolved.

To date, Gabon’s diaspora engagement has been limited. The country has had low levels of remittances for several years.¹⁰ Over 80% of Gabon’s revenues come from oil exports, which has further insulated the country from reliance on diaspora financial flows.

The Gabonese diaspora is divided along political lines. Many Gabonese diaspora organisations in France are of a political character and were active in the 2016 post-election crisis.¹¹ Political opposition within the Gabonese diaspora in France is particularly active on social media.¹²

Despite this, the government has sought to encourage diaspora investment, especially in the agro-processing and forestry sectors, by offering preferential investment opportunities in Special Economic Zones (see Spotlight section).

Achievements

Gabon is interested in regulating migration flows and in particular in stemming brain drain. Consequently, the emphasis of its policy approach to diaspora engagement has been on seeking to enable circular return, as shown by its Accord France-Gabon relatif à la gestion concertée des flux migratoires et au codéveloppement agreement.

Gabon has recognised dual citizenship, and has also enabled diaspora voting for Gabonese citizens abroad to enable them to play a role in the political life of the country. This arose in part due to requests from the diaspora, combined with the government’s interest in enabling greater diaspora contributions to the country.

In addition, Gabon has created some nascent structures to support diaspora engagement, such as the Direction des Gabonais de l'étranger, and an Assistance Fund to help Gabonese diaspora returnees or who are in distress (see Spotlight section).

Obstacles

- Lack of trust: There is a lack of trust between the government and its diaspora, which in France (the principal country of residence in Europe) tends to be polarised and politicised. This acts as a barrier to diaspora engagement in Gabon.¹³
- Lack of capacity: Gabon lacks adequate structures and capacity to drive forward a diaspora engagement agenda. The few existing structures require strengthening to fulfil their potential.
- Lack of policy focus: Gabon has few policy frameworks for diaspora engagement.
