Terminology: Sudan refers to its diaspora as 'Sudanese working abroad' (Arabic: السودانيون العاملون بالخارج as-sudāniyyūn al-'āmilūn bi-l-khārij) or 'expatriates' (Arabic: المغتربون al-mughtaribūn). The term diaspora is also used informally.

Sudan does not have a diaspora engagement policy.

Although the Cabinet Office is due to start developing one in the course of 2020.⁴

1 http://citizenshiprightsafrika.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/01/South_Sudan_Act_2011.pdf No restrictions on dual citizenship are laid down in Sudanese law. However, Article 10 of the Sudanese Nationality Act Amendment of 2011 states that Sudanese nationality shall automatically be revoked if a person acquires the nationality of South Sudan.

Overview of the policy and legislative framework

- 1997 ● Sudan Labour Code requires all Sudanese who wish to work abroad to register with and gain permission from the Ministry of Labour and Manpower.⁵
- 1998 ● Organisation of the Affairs of Sudanese Working Abroad Act regulates emigration of Sudanese. Article 4 of the Act created the Secretariat of Sudanese Working Abroad (SSWA), a department of the Ministry of Cabinet Affairs, as the lead agency for diaspora engagement in Sudan (see below).⁶
- 2003 ● Passports and Immigration Act sets out entry and exit requirements from Sudan for Sudanese and foreigners. This also required all Sudanese seeking to leave the country to obtain an exit visa and leave through an approved port of entry.⁷ Exit visa charges were paid to the Secretariat of Sudanese Working Abroad, although these were abolished in May 2020.⁸
- 2015 ● The Five-Year Programme for Economic Reform 2015-2019 includes references to increasing remittances flows and savings flows from Sudanese working abroad into the national banking system by stabilising and unifying the exchange rate.⁹
- 2007
2031 ● Twenty-Five year National Strategy 2007-2031 places diaspora as an important factor in developing the external labour market. They see a role in connecting people working outside the country in locating solutions to address the problems and concerns within the country. The strategy also has a view to harnessing diaspora skills to work towards sustainable development, potential investment and to train Sudanese in specialised skills.¹⁰
- 2021
▼
2023 ● Sudan Poverty Reduction Paper recognises diaspora or Sudanese Migrants Abroad as important contributors during humanitarian crisis and as part of a social safety net.

» Trends

From the 2000s onwards, Sudan has worked to engage its diaspora both to maintain and increase diaspora financial flows into the country, and to stem brain-drain. Sudanese diaspora professionals and investors are active in the country.¹¹ Sudan has also sought to work with its diaspora to undertake lobbying and advocacy in countries of residence for sanctions on the country to be overturned, in particular the restrictions on importation of medicines and medical equipment that remain largely in place.

Following a coup d'état and a popular uprising against the military regime in 2019, Sudanese diaspora groups and networks were involved in advising the popular uprising and the newly formed Forces of Freedom and Change (FFC) alliance in relation to advocacy, governance, and media outreach.^{12 13}

13 This new political landscape promises to create an environment that is more enabling for diaspora engagement. Indeed, the civilian government includes several diasporans, including Prime Minister Hamdok. himself. See <https://www.aljazeera.com/news/2019/08/abdalla-hamdok-sudan-prime-minister-190821104935717.html>

The Government of Sudan has since invited the Sudanese diaspora to participate in building a new Sudan. It is due to start developing a formal diaspora policy in the next few months and also to consult with its diaspora around the world to develop new schemes and incentives to encourage diaspora resource flows, skills transfer, and productive return.

The onset of the Coronavirus pandemic in March 2020 has lent this outreach an added urgency, and Sudanese health professionals based in Canada, the UK, and the US as well as Gulf states have been active in mobilising medical and other supplies.¹⁴ In April 2020, Prime Minister Hamdok launched the 'Stand for Sudan' campaign, calling on Sudanese nationals around the world to contribute financially to support the country's economy during a time of crisis.¹⁵

The Sudanese government, the UN, the EU, and international partners and donors to Sudan met in Berlin at the Sudan Partners' Forum in June 2020 to discuss a $1.8 billion assistance package to Sudan, as well as political support for the transition government. The Sudanese diaspora was identified as a partner in Sudan's development by the Forum.¹⁶

Achievements

Sudan has sought to engage its diaspora to increase diaspora financial flows (remittances and investments), skills transfer, and productive return since the late 1990s, partly in response to international sanctions on the country. To achieve this, it established the Secretariat of Sudanese Working Abroad (SSWA) to serve as a point of contact with the diaspora, whose website contains links to investment and other opportunities aimed at the diaspora.

The requirement to purchase an exit visa – and pay outstanding taxes – in order to leave the country had long been a complaint of Sudanese emigrants and was increasingly out of step with policy in other African states. In May 2020, the government abolished the exit visa system entirely to facilitate greater diaspora circular migration.¹⁷

Sudan has also negotiated bilateral health worker agreements with Ireland and Saudi Arabia with the aim of managing migratory flows and addressing brain-drain by providing training placements for Sudanese residents, and short locum modalities for Sudanese specialists in addition to institutional links in both countries.

Sudan has established a National Fund, administered by SSWA, to support repatriation of returnees and their families and children and to help them to reintegrate into society.¹⁸ Sudan has also worked with IOM and the EU as part of the Joint Initiative for Migrant Protection and Reintegration of Returnees to improve protections for returning migrants and diaspora returnees from states in the MENA region, most recently in relation to the COVID-19 pandemic.^{19,20}

Obstacles

- Lack of trust: Even after the 2019 revolution, there remains significant distrust between the diaspora and the Sudanese government, in particular distrust of Sudanese government representatives in countries of residence remains as embassy staff have largely remained the same. SSWA was also mistrusted for being the agency responsible for charging the Sudanese diaspora for exit visas and National Contribution payments.²¹
- Lack of information: The Sudanese diaspora faces a lack of readily available information on investments, volunteering, and skills transfers' opportunities. The SSWA website is only available in Arabic, which many in the diaspora outside the Gulf States do not read.
- Lack of capacity for diaspora engagement: The Sudanese government lacks resources and capacity to facilitate engagement with Sudan's diaspora as effectively as possible. There is also sometimes poor coordination between SSWA and diaspora initiatives.

Enhancing regional remittance flows 2021

REMITTANCES

The Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) and the United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) entered into a two-year agreement in May 2021 to support the harmonization of remittance policies across the IGAD countries including Sudan. The government of Sudan will work with UNCDF and IGAD to map out all the relevant policies and regulations. These efforts are all ultimately aimed at keeping remittances flowing and shifting more of them from the informal unregulated networks and into safe, regulated, and transparent channels. This work is also supported by Sida, the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency, as part of its broad strategy of engagement with African stakeholders including the African Institute of Remittances (AIR), the African Union, and the regional economic communities.

SSWA Stand for Sudan Webinars

NETWORKING + PARTNERSHIPS

SSWA organises diaspora conferences in Sudan, attended by representatives of diaspora groups and professional networks, as well as officials from different ministries, to discuss ways of increasing diaspora participation in the country's development in different sectors. In July 2020 SSWA started a series of online diaspora engagement and consultation events targeting the diaspora in the MENA region, Europe, and North America. These events took place as part of Prime Minister Abdallah Hamdok's 'Stand for Sudan' national campaign, which calls on Sudanese diaspora around the world to contribute to support the country's development financially during the current COVID-19 pandemic.²²
